Robinson Rise Estate Cobblebank

As families expand, the quest for a spacious traditional Aussie backyard is becoming increasingly difficult.

As a result, new home designs have shifted towards innovative and flexible solutions that address the changing needs of modern families, ensuring comfortable living even on more compact blocks of land.

Modern homes now frequently incorporate co-living arrangements.

These designs typically provide bedrooms with their own ensuite bathrooms, offering increased privacy and comfort for all household members.

This feature is especially beneficial for families with teenagers, helping to create harmonious living spaces for everyone.

Co-Living Homes Investor

Co-living homes are predominantly designed for investors, providing a practical and effective way to meet the high demand for shared accommodation.

The choice of floorplans available is guided by the size of each land parcel, allowing homes to be customised to suit a variety of needs and ways of living

- If an estate requires an upgraded fence, additional charges will apply.

7 star energy rating

- Standard home designs will meet minimum 7 star energy rating for all house plans and all facades on any orientation. In the event a design is modified, lighter external colours are selected or a neighbouring property impacts your energy assessment, additional charges may apply to achieve energy requirements.

Whole of Home requirements

- Standard designs include a 3kW PV (photovoltaic) system. The orientation of the land along with the positioning of items that penetrate the roof can impact the placement of the PV panels, and in some cases additional costs may apply for additional panels or extra labour. In the event a larger system is required to achieve the Whole of Home requirements, further costs will also apply.

Livable housing

- Standard designs meet the requirements of Livable Housing, however varying site conditions, site levels and/or design changes can require further adjustments to comply, and as a result may incur additional costs.

Co-living terms and conditions: The information provided about our co-living product is for general informational purposes only. Terms and conditions apply to all aspects of our services, and specific details should be discussed directly with our representatives. The potential to earn $800-$900 per week in rent is subject to the location, market conditions, and the property management company chosen by the client. Actual rental income may vary. While our co-living packages are designed to be cashflow positive, this outcome is dependent on various factors including market conditions, interest rates, and property management efficiency. There is no guarantee of positive cashflow. While co-living properties may have the potential for higher resale value, this is not guaranteed and is influenced by market trends, location, and property condition at the time of sale. The 5-year rental guarantee is provided by our preferred property management company, and is subject to their strict selection criteria. Terms and conditions will apply. We are not the property manager. Property management arrangements need to be finalised between the client and their chosen property management service. We do not offer financial advice.
